

April 18 - 23, 2007
DILMOS PRESENTS:
TERRATERRA
Collection by ANDREA SALVETTI

For me TerraTerra is very simple, something effortless within everyone's reach, lacking in preconceived or sophisticated aspects. It is natural like clouds in the sky and plants in the ground, like birds in their nests and people in their homes. A.S.

Welcome to Andrea's craftsmanship, a world shaped by his technical expertise and his love and knowledge of nature as expressed in his magical reproductions. Welcome to Andrea's emotions informing poetry and his intrinsic memory of things, both partners of his daily life. And welcome to his bold choices of materials, dimensions, weights and to the deeper meanings of the natural world into which he draws us in filtering his keen observations of the outdoors. Welcome to his artistic determination free of marketing innuendos. Welcome Andrea Salvetti, bearer of humus, of fertile genius. And welcome to his gift for story telling using animals, tree trunks, cases of fruit, eggs, trees and nests. Welcome to his tales, personal notes winding their way through a land off the beaten track. The province of Lucca between the town of Pescaglia and the Apuan Alps. A region of wooded wilderness, of farming communities and of the heart.

Clara Mantica

The exhibition is accompanied by the book Andrea Salvetti TerraTerra, published by Electa, texts by Clara Mantica, Gianpiero Mughini and Alessandro Romanini. The book covers several of the milestones in Andrea Salvetti's work and looks back at 10 years of artistic activity in the fields of design and sculpture.
